Salvatore Zarrella

Construction Management Group is the top Fairfield County firm in leading the movement on the exciting building concept called Passive House. In 2011, Salvatore was part of the early group of builders, architects and engineers in the United States to study at the Passive House Institute (U.S) and now fully experienced and knowledgeable about this amazing building standard.

This year, Construction Management Group is taking that knowledge and passion to start construction on two new Passive Houses, the first in the City of Stamford, Connecticut. One is a transitional farmhouse and the other is a modern (featured above), both will set on the same subdivision. These two homes will be revolutionary builds and will set a new high standard for energy efficient home building in the Fairfield County area.

Our firm is a proud member of the HBRA, New York Passive House Organization and the Stamford 2030 District. Construction Management Group are the 2014 winners of the HOBI award for Best Custom Home (5000 SF – 6000 SF), Best In Town Custom Home, and Best New Construction Technology.
